The current situation is typical political short term self preservation thinking. The focus is on the short term situation of preserving jobs and other local economic factors rather than on the long term view of preserving a huge multi-state industry based on the Great Lakes. Any legislator who opposes controlling the carp situation by closing waterways will be ruthlessly attacked and will probably not be re-elected. When the carp ultimately get through (and they will) there will be an economic disaster that will affect the economy of the entire nation.
