To Whom It May Concern: I am writing to ask that everything that can be done is done to protect the Great Lakes from the threat of Asian Carp. Studies have shown that the electric barrier more than likely will not work because fish can get through the electric current when ships pass through and smaller carp able to swim through in schools of other fish. The status quo is not acceptable and we need quick action to improve protection of the lakes.

We need to protect this natural resource for future generations and no cost should be prohibitive.
