General Peabody, in closing, acknowledged nature's power citing Katrina's ability to overwhelm the levees in New Orleans.

I ask you, along those same lines, to acknowledge "man's" impact on our natural landscape. We the settlers of this country have not only managed to dig a canal artificially connecting two waterways, but we intentionally imported the now illegal Asian carp.

Please don't approach this with a modest sense of what humanity can achieve. So we destroy so we create. Apply the available information and energy and fix what has been broken.
