I am an avid fly fisherman on many of the tributaries that feed into Lake Erie and am also a lifetime member of Trout Unlimited. I feel the last thing we need to harm the Great Lakes region is an invasive species such as the Asian Carp. I have seen videos and have read articles into how destructive these fish are from greatly harming the native species of the particular waterway they inhabit to being a very serious hazard to boaters. I suggest taking any means necessary to 100% preventing this invasive species from harming our recreational activities in the Great Lakes Region. Thank you very much for your time.

Sincerely,
