I am concerned that the Army Corp of Engineers is expanding the scope of their work on options that will likely not stop the Asian carp from making their home in the Great Lakes -- even though Congress mandated they focus on prevention. Plus I understand that they plan to take no action at all for the next 5 years. The carp are not waiting.

To bring about meaningful action more quickly, the Corps need to get engaged with the Great Lakes Commission and Great Lakes and St. Lawrence River Cities Initiative's study on how to address tricky issues like flooding and transportation in the Chicago area - their work could save the Corps years in studies and millions of dollars, helping us get to a real solution faster.
