The Great Lakes region of the US has been under siege for some time now. Loss of Jobs due to the global marketplace (aka 'move the business to a third world country to build it cheaper and sell it for the same price') and companies moving to wherever they can compete (usually south of here where wages are cheaper) has been tough. It seems the only business that's doing well around here is medical, because there are only baby-boomers and seniors left, and they need to grab our money before we all die off. So for as little as our government has done to help this region, please at least respect and support our 30+ year effort to resurrect our Great Lakes to make them the jewel that they are again today, by getting the asian carp problem under control. We have the lakes, and deserve to be able to enjoy our waters (and the sport fishing that comes with them) before we need to take advantage of our world class hospital networks.
