Asian Carp have just about destroyed the Mississippi River ecosystem and now they are within a few dozen miles of the Great Lakes. We're not a Great Lakes state, but ultimately this affects us all and we need to keep these monsters out of Lake Michigan.

The US Army Corps of Engineers are taking way too long to make a decision. Although this issue has been studied extensively they insist that they need another 4 years to reach a conclusion as to whether or not they should close the shipping channel, thereby making it nearly impossible for the carp to reach Lake Michigan via open water. In four years the carp will have established a breeding population in the Great Lakes and it will be too late.
