Asian Carp issue--please consider that the entire ecosystem of the Great Lakes is at stake, not merely the financial impact between the Chicago Area Water System and Great Lakes sport fishing--it's so much more important--letting the Asian carp into the Great Lakes will affect the entire food chain of the Lakes. Never being able to eat a perch, walleye, or whitefish again...or see an eagle 'fishing'--consider the long term impact--The financial impact of dealing with invasive species' consequences like the Zebra and Quagga mussels should be considered in the financial equation, not just the sport fishing costs. But ultimately it's all the unseen consequences of destroying what's left of the Great lakes ecosystem that worries me the most.
