As the owner of a beautiful property on the Lake Michigan waterfront, I recall the problem we had decades ago with the alewives. The whole beach and the shallows were littered with thousands of dead fish, gulls were dying from the pollution, the stench was unbearable on hot days, and we feared the lake would die. The salmon resolved that problem.

Unless we have a way to deal with the problems Asian Carp would bring, we must make every effort to refuse them entrance into our lake and the economy that it supports in Michigan. With thanks for your help--Joyce Gouwens
