To Whom it Concerns at the Corps,

I keep my boat in Winthrop Harbor, IL and use it, for fishing on Lake Michigan. In the past few years the zebra and quaga mussels have created quite a problem and now the Asian carp are posing a threat. I feel strongly that we as a country need to cut funding in all categories but this study must move forward. Two of the men that will be crewing on my boat this summer are Doug Ehorn former Director of the EPA in Chicago, now a wetlands specialist and Steve Johnson former Administrator of the EPA in Washington, D.C., so I have been informed that gradients are in place to prevent carp access to Lake Michigan they just need upkeep and funding for power. I encourage you to follow through with restricting the carp and with funding/studying GLMRIS.

Thank you!
