As an avid enthusiast of the St. Lawrence River for both recreation and work, I would not like to see our playground become the next stricken waterway. It seems to me that at the rate the invasive silver carp are approaching the Lake Michigan we would be hard pressed to stop them. I understand we need to do appropriate studies to make sure that a good tactical plan is in place but, I fear that if this is not approached sooner than later it will be too late for our wonderful river. I could not even begin to imagine how the life of the river could drastically change for all those who enjoy and rely on it to live. I know my opinion is one of many but, it should at least be said that I believe a solution has to come sooner than later.
