I have lived along the St. Lawrence River for 10 years, and am well aware of the risks of invasive species to this fragile environment. As a Thousand Islands Land Trust Board member I have seen invasive species such as swallow wort completely take over and devastate properties - including our protected lands. The round goby and zebra mussels have drastically changed the biodiversity of marine life in the River. Please don't wait until it is too late to prevent the incredible damage that the asian carp can - and will do - to this waterway that is so very important for people on both sides of the St. Lawrence Seaway. Thank you.
